Meat and Bread.

The report of the department of agriculture for May shows that the wheat crop for this country aggregating less than half a billion bushels, or less than two-thirds of last year's harvest.

There is nothing mysterious about the cause of this alarming decrease. In previous reports the department had shown that there was a 25 per cent fall in the yield of wheat in 1919.

When the hand is not put to the plow the earth is not going to bring forth abundant harvests of fine fruit of its own accord. Nuts and berries, and such squirrel fruit may come that way, but as for wheat and the fine white flour—by the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread.

The time will come to read the figures on the corn crop of the present year, and nobody in possession of his senses doubts that a similar state of affairs will be revealed.

As for the meat to go with the bread, there is an increasing shortage in the number of cattle and hogs to be counted on the farms and some think the market will find itself short for the year by one-fourth of its normal production.

The amount of available farm labor, says the department of agriculture, is only 12 per cent normal. In other words, the shortage is about the same as in the spring of 1919, our most unfavorable year.

Yet we hear nothing now of farmers taking to the land by the thousands as they did then, of Boy Scout organizations volunteering for the greatest of the arts of peace: of civic societies and patriots' clubs rising up overnight to work that the people may be fed.

We hear a good deal of overall clubs, but the members thereof would scorn to be seen at the city's common slaughtering and the lowly hogs.

The farm laborers of the country have not suddenly been translated to the skies, as they undoubtedly deserved, they have merely gone off to the nearby cities where better pay and easier hours awaited them.

In a report prepared at Cornell university it is declared that in the state of New York alone there are 24,000 unemployed farmhands, while in the meantime the cities of that state are in a panic as to what to do with their unemployed population.

The wages and the good times hold out to them by the public constitutes the plainest of invitations to the farmers, both owners and hired help, to move to the city. They are offered there something very different from the unenviable lot of the average farmer: remunerative and gentlemanly positions as bootblacks, porters, floorwalkers, public men, reformers, chauntiqua, publicity men, to name but a few, positions in the manufacture and sale of non-essentials of every character prized by the comfort-loving public.

When the public stops paying high prices for services and commodities that are not needed, the purveyors thereof will of necessity gravitate back to the farm in order to raise the bread and meat that always have a certain market value.

When all the present harvest is gathered and tabulated, say about the first week of November, this country will be in the pinch of such a dearth in the necessities of life, as has had no parallel since the civil war.

The presidential elections will be held under that cloud. The people, usually given to more or less self-education on that presidential occasion, will perceive how at last that it is not politics or either party that is at stake, but a return to the old-fashioned values of industry, economy and plain living.

We have a feeling that the reason of the season will be sufficient to convince even the obstinate that the curbs must be put upon luxuries, and that the necessities of life will take care of themselves.

A New Republic.

Armenia has announced herself some sort of a national movement and called it a republic. The country has recognized its independence and the family of nations will have to take notice of it.

Armenia has been a part of the Ottoman empire for centuries, and has been a part of the Russian empire for centuries. It has been a part of the Persian empire for centuries.

Armenia has been a part of the British empire for centuries. It has been a part of the French empire for centuries. It has been a part of the German empire for centuries.

Armenia has been a part of the Italian empire for centuries. It has been a part of the Japanese empire for centuries. It has been a part of the American empire for centuries.

Armenia has been a part of the Chinese empire for centuries. It has been a part of the Indian empire for centuries. It has been a part of the Australian empire for centuries.

Armenia has been a part of the New Zealand empire for centuries. It has been a part of the South African empire for centuries. It has been a part of the Canadian empire for centuries.

Armenia has been a part of the United States empire for centuries. It has been a part of the British North America empire for centuries. It has been a part of the Dominion of Wales empire for centuries.

Armenia has been a part of the Principality of Wales empire for centuries. It has been a part of the County of Glamorgan empire for centuries. It has been a part of the Lordship of Glamorgan empire for centuries.

Armenia has been a part of the Baronage of Glamorgan empire for centuries. It has been a part of the Bishopric of Glamorgan empire for centuries. It has been a part of the Diocese of Glamorgan empire for centuries.

Armenia has been a part of the Archdiocese of Glamorgan empire for centuries. It has been a part of the Ecclesiastical Province of Glamorgan empire for centuries. It has been a part of the Kingdom of Glamorgan empire for centuries.

It will take time to replace them. Nearly every Turkish factory, commercial institution and other organization is managed and controlled by Armenians. These Armenians are not only the owners of the factories, but they are also the managers. They are the ones who are running the country.

There is talk in this country of Armenian Armies, with rifles and ammunition, and if this was done it would form at least the nucleus for an army of defense. Armenia could become a free and prosperous country. Time was when Armenian horses, cattle and sheep were the best on the European markets, but these have been all swept away by the Turkish. Under their rule, the Armenians have been treated as second-class citizens.

DANIELS REPLIES TO ADMIRAL SIMS' NAVAL CHARGES

Admiral Sims' charges against the British navy, which have been charged with failure to meet with more expedition in the first few months of the war, it will be necessary to contrast the bold and audacious policies we presented and urged during the war with the policy of the British navy.

Sim's Criticized.

Secretary Daniels said he had never publicly or privately criticized Admiral Sims for lack of early vision in connection with the British navy. He said that he had read and admired the work of the British navy.

Fifty Teams Start Out To Secure Big Salvation Fund

Opposite the Tennessee club, on the northeast corner of Court square, will be erected the Salvation Army rescue home. There the needy will find refuge. There will be found the homes of the welcome American boys handed out coffee to them during the war.

There no question will be asked except that of human need.

It will take $100,000 to make this home and its maintenance possible. More than 200 determined men and women got together at the Chamber of Commerce, formed 50 teams of from 10 to 20 persons each, and went out Monday morning to raise the money.

The value of human lives can not be expressed in terms of dollars and cents. The value of the kind of work the Salvation Army gives likewise can not be determined in dollars and cents.
